Support the WA Refugee Welcoming and Healing Center

At the Congolese Integration Network, our vision is to foster a brighter, more inclusive future for Congolese immigrants and refugees, along with those from diverse backgrounds. Our mission is to create a safe, nurturing environment where healing, community building, and holistic support converge. With this capital development project, we proudly introduce the Washington Refugee Welcoming and Healing Center—an essential space for over 2,000 Congolese immigrants and refugees, and hundreds more from various backgrounds. This center will become a vibrant hub for transformative services, housing, and community-building activities.

The Washington Welcoming and Healing Center will offer newcomers stable housing from the moment they arrive. They will have access to our crucial and proven culturally appropriate case management services, connect to essential services, and build a sense of belonging and community for successful integration.

Why We Need Your Support

The Congolese Integration Network (CIN) has been diligently serving our community for over six years, providing culturally and linguistically appropriate services to support the integration of Congolese immigrants and refugees in King County. Our current facilities, while valuable, are no longer sufficient to meet the growing needs of our community. The Welcoming and Healing Center will empower us to continue addressing critical issues such as homelessness, mental health, access to vital resources, and building strong community and family relations.

Since its founding in 2016, CIN has been a sanctuary for Congolese survivors—a place to gather, heal, and build resilience. Over the years, we have expanded our mission to support the integration of Congolese immigrants and refugees in the King County area. Our dedication to culturally relevant services has helped community members tackle challenges like homelessness, mental health issues, and accessing essential services. CIN has become a trusted community advocate and a resource hub for identifying community needs and developing solutions. We play a pivotal role in nurturing a cultural home and offering support, services, and healing for immigrants and refugees not only from the DRC but also from other nations.
